Foreblight processions passed through the principal streets, which were thickly hong with flags and tapestry. Serefindes were given to the captain-general and general of marine. This little matter has at last stirred up our war department, but we save little hope of redress the ocean. There is, then, nothing in from the present administration. It is the way of the Mississippi as an "all-thetoo busy patting Louisiana's robbers on the back, and in looking after the great third-term-iden to think of anything York Herald admits this, though with cise. Then, a rebuke of Spanish insolence might interfere with our annual supply of Havana eigars, which would be a very serious matter. Still we think even General Grant will awake to the necessity of showing Spain that there is a point beyond which forbearance is not

THE JUDICIARY.

The question of having the Judiciary of each State appointed by the executive, with the advice and consent of the senate, in lieu of the present elective system, is agitating the minds of the general public. There has been a growing hostility to the elective system, called out by the corruption and incompetency made palpable in the every-day history of many of the courts of the States, and men are looking about them for a better system of judicial organization than that afforded by popular elections. It would be a ridiculous proceed-It would seem that the enterprising car-ing to submit to popular election the selection of a State geologist or pelbagger is keeping the noble traits of character, to which he has an undisengineer, since those called upon to make the selection know little or noth- puted title, in fine preservation.
